

land, the kind and indulgent parent; the trusty friend and benevolent neighbor.— As a public teacher, he did not shun to declare the counsel of the Lord. Well may the righteous say, "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth." On the 2th his remains were committed to the earth, amidst a large concourse of mourning and sympathising friends, when an appropriate discourse was delivered by the Rev. Moses C. Welch, from Eccl. xii. 7.

— At Windsor, the 31st of July, Mrs. Olive Rockwell, wife of Mr. Simeon Rockwell, aged 31 years.— At Glastenbury, the 7th inst. Mrs. Elizabeth-Mary Hale, wife of Elisha Hale, Esq. On the 2d instant, at Glastenbury, Miss Emily Moseley, in the 23d year of her age.— At Willington, the 9th inst. Mr. Amos James, aged 69.— At East-Hartford, the 9th inst. DIED—In England, Elizabeth Clayton, aged 60. This woman, from an early propensity to masculine employments, had worked as a ship carpenter at a dockyard upwards of 40 years, and was always in man's apparel; she used to drink, chew tobacco, and keep company only with the workmen, yet would never enter into the matrimonial state. She was a strong robust woman, and never permitted any one to insult her with impunity. [A woman, aged about 50, now works regularly in man's apparel, as a ship carpenter, at Halifax, Nova-Scotia. She is capable and industrious, and can utter an oath, and turn off her grog, with as little ceremony as any of her fellow-labourers.]

— In Lancasterville, (S. C.) Miss Jane E. Dunlap, daughter of Samuel D. Esq. aged 10 years; by suddenly reaching to the floor for thread, and having her needle in such a position that it penetrated into her breast a little above her heart, and which occasioned her death in an hour after receiving the wound.— In Portland, Funice, daughter of Mr. Wm. S. Quincy, aged 4 years; in attempting to swallow a tamarind stone, it stuck in the windpipe.

— At Harlem, (N. Y.) after a short illness, Mrs. Elizabeth Cotton, the wife of Mr. Daniel Cotton, and daughter of the late Mr. Ebenezer Watson, of this City, aged 37 years. The world can boast of but few characters of equal worth. Her amiableness and dignity would have graced any sphere; from the ardor and tenderness of her affections, she has been, to all around her, in all situations, a source of the dearest joys of domestic life, in the various relations of wife, mother, sister and friend; and her spotless purity and elevated piety, it may confidently be hoped, have procured for her perfect bliss in a better world. Her death will be severely felt by all who knew her, for by all who knew her, without an exception, she was admired and beloved. To her family her precepts and example were beyond all price.

— At Ashford, on the 6th inst. the Rev. Enoch Pond, aged 51 years. A long and distressing sickness which preceded his dissolution, he endured with patience and resignation to the divine will; in his last hours he set a pattern worthy to be imitated by all men; and when called for by his master, evidently departed with those bright prospects which attend the dying christian. In his private relations he was the tender and affectionate hus-
